The course of lectures and entertainments—twelve in number—given by the management of the Summer School of the University of Virginia during the present session were of an exceptionally high character. They were well attended by the students and were also well patronized by the city of Charlottesville. Every audience of the course has been appreciative of the information received by attendance of these diversions from the regular on June 27th at which Mrs. Mattie Bettis Thomas, soprano; Miss McNettle, violinist, and Miss McNettle, pianist, were present. The audience with their vocal and instrumental selections.

The second, on "The Heart of England," by Dr. C. W. Kent, of the faculty of the University of Virginia, was a beautiful and touching story which he told him in Shakespeare's home and life, and to stimulate a desire to go from England to much received on this side of the Atlantic only from books. There is no doubt that the speaker was a pleasant and attractive speaker and his effort.

On the following evening, July 1st, Miss Waterbury, instructor of music in the Summer Session, conducted the choir of high order. The Misses Hayes, Minor, McNeill and Waterbury and Messrs. Swinley, Tindler and others were present. The instrumental soloists, and Dr. McBrady as a humorous reader. Each number on the program was well presented and the appreciation of the audience was evidenced by the repeated encores.

On Monday evening, July 22d, he devoted his time on this date to tracing the life and the philosophy of his life and was discussed at some length Dr. McNettle conducted this program.

July 19th, 1906. College, delivered the first of a series of lectures on "The French Revolution." His special topic for that evening was "The French Revolution as told by the poets." The events leading up to the Revolution and the participation of Mirabeau in the Revolution were presented in a pleasant, forceful manner. His thorough mastery of his subject was apparent to all who were fortunate enough to hear him.

Dr. Kent gave the second of his lectures on Thursday evening, July 19th, 1906. His special topic was "The French Revolution as told by the poets." He dwelt particularly on Scott and Burns, reciting various events in the career of these poets as they appeared in the history of the Revolution. His glowing on the canvas the homes and other places frequented and rendered famous by him.

July 20th, 1906. Dr. Kennedy in Scotland and portrayal of life and manner of the South. All who heard this course of historical lectures must be benefitted by the thoroughness of the presentation. W. S. Adams, of Lynchburg, assisted by Miss Minor, music teacher in the University of Virginia, sang a number of the magnificent pipe organ in Campbell Hall. Professor Adams's performance proved him to be an artist of no small degree. Miss Minor, who had the applause of the audience by the sweetness of her vocal solos.

July 21st, 1906. Dr. Kennedy's lectures were given on Thursday evening, July 25th, by Dr. J. M. McBryde, professor of English in the University of Virginia. Dr. McBryde, who is an excellent student of literature and an entertaining reader, explained the origin of the French Revolution. He read some of the shorter ones. He furnished both instruction and amusement.

The Irish were interesting. The French Revolution was related as the "French Revolution," with "Rosespiere" as a special theme, was taken up by Dr. Mitchell on Tuesday evening. The political conditions as well as the horrors of that period, showing that the weakness and duplicity of the French led to his execution and the execution of Marie Antoinette.

On Wednesday evening, July 10th, the Summer School presented the program of Sumner the State Superintendent of Public Instruction of Virginia. Hon. J. D. Bagleyton, Jr. His opening address was very interesting. He called attention to the wit in American literature, and quoted from several humorists. The subject of negroes among school children was brought forward. The subject of negroes among school children and even among certain of the religious sects. His closing subject was the slave system of America. It was entertaining throughout.

The last of the series of Dr. Kent's lectures was given on Thursday evening, July 11th. On that occasion he conveyed his audience to London and showed them various views about the University of Cambridge and Oxford Universities. Each of Dr. Kent's lectures was instructive and interesting, and each was concluded by the large

The management of the Summer School could not in their thoughtfulness for the students have provided more enjoyable or better sources of instruction than this course of lectures and entertainments prove to be.

The need of more money for the school district was the first term, and that led to ask of the county supervisors an increased appropriation for school expenses, making a school levy of $1.25 on the $100 of property values. The levy for 1937 having been increased to meet the Jamestown exposition appropriation and other expenditures, the school levy was increased to $1.50. The increase continued permanently and applied toward the school expenses.

Primary in Fauquier.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
MORRISVILLE, VA., July 27.—There is apparently more interest felt in the primary than in the last congressional primary. A pretty general belief exists that the closest contest to be settled on the 29th is that between Sheriff J. C. Ambler, of Marshall, here all expected to be defeated by the Oilinger, with the chances slightly favoring the re-election of the present incumbent. J. M. M. Green, of Warrenton; Mr. A. D.
